HISTORICAL NOTES The rapid growth of the town during the twenties, pointed to the need for a new building, on a more favourable site than the original residential site. On February 15th 1935, the Hon. D. H. Drummond, Minister for Education, laid the foundation stone of the existing building - a fine, brick structure of two storeys. But with the steadily increasing numbers, the need for a separate Infants' School became imperative. The new building was constructed immediately after the war, and opened by the Minister for Education, the Hon. R. J. Heffron, on 28th February 1947. An outstanding feature of the building was the murals by "Pixie O'Harris" which were unfortunately painted over many years ago. The Infants School merged with the High School about four years ago and now operates as a Secondary School.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE The late forties buildings have local historic significance for representing a time of expansion in public school education facilities not only in the Hunter, but throughout the state. Socially the buildings are of local significance to the "baby boomer" generation. Scientifically the buildings have the potential to reveal information about the approach to primary school education in the immediate post-war years and as such, have local significance.
